U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral & Social Sciences

The U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences

ARI is a singular organization of scientists (almost all Ph.D.s) conducting research in broad areas of Organization, Personnel, Leadership, and Training. ARI is the premier Behavioral Science laboratory for the military services, and continually seeks outstanding applicants.

ARI research is nationally recognized. APA recently awarded ARI its Presidential Citation for "enormous contributions to the behavioral and social sciences."

We're looking for Research Psychologists and Survey Statisticians

The ARI broad-based approach to personnel performance and training ensures that Army programs benefit from state-of-the-art behavioral and social science knowledge and techniques.
